Llewellyn Park is a private 425 acre community in West Orange, NJ, 14 miles west of New York City. Established in 1857, Llewellyn Park is listed in the National and State Historic Registers as both the first romantically landscaped and one of the first planned luxury estate communities in America. Llewellyn Park is also the site of Glenmont, home of Thomas Alva Edison.

The LP Preservation Foundation is a non-profit 501(c)3 charitable organization dedicated to preserving the historical integrity of Llewellyn Park. The LPPF also raises funds to award scholarships to qualified recipients for the study of landscape design and preservation.
